ABOUT INNER VISION INTERNATIONAL

For more than two decades Inner Vision International, Inc. (IVI) has empowered American youth, parents and teachers to recognize their value as societal contributors and global citizens. IVI has developed a powerful evidence-based social emotional learning series that has the potential to serve as a national curriculum model and transform the life trajectory of America's youth. Through IVI's program, parents and students can develop their leadership skills by gaining essential education in the areas of character development and life management skills.

IVI has the capability to develop district-specific curriculum, workshops, and online training materials to meet the unique and specific needs of individual communities. Our capability to develop relevant content that stimulates thought-provoking conversations and fosters positive behavior transformation stems from our commitment to help create a more socially and emotionally developed society. Using our products, caregivers and teachers will develop more meaningful conversations with students, thereby fostering better relationships and creating a fertile environment for learning.

Inner Vision International has developed several innovative programs to help our partners educate effectively. They include: The Vision[®], a Social Emotional Learning curricula series for youth in grades 4-12, The STOP[™] - paperback, audio and online reading materials geared towards improving police and community relations, The NEW Conversation[™] - an online learning system designed to educate and provide solutions on the Police and Black, Indigenous, People of Color (BIPOC) Relations, eLearning with DB[™] - an online platform for school districts and The BLACK Series - an online learning series featuring Inner Vision International's CEO, Dwayne Bryant. Known as 'the child whisperer', Dwayne takes his unique ability to resonate with students, parents, law enforcement and community members to an eLearning platform.

The STOP™ - Improving Police and Community Relations*

Dwayne Bryant himself shares seven real-life personal encounters with law enforcement from childhood into adulthood—some light-hearted and humorous and some risky and dangerous. With compelling narratives, research and humor, The STOP™ teaches youth how to interact with police in an appropriate manner through thought-provoking conversations about intelligent action between families, communities and, law enforcement. This unique program provides a framework for parents, teachers, and community leaders to engage in meaningful dialogue with youth about their life expectations while offering them practical solutions to the problematic relationship between community and law enforcement.

The NEW Conversation: College Edition (2-Part Series)

The NEW Conversation: College Edition is the perfect platform to create a safe space for courageous conversations about Police Brutality and its impact on Communities of Color. All stakeholders will be presented with compelling information to understand the history of police misconduct against communities of color. Students will learn tangible solutions to eliminate unnecessary police violence. This generation of college students will be empowered to ensure police brutality ends in America.

The NEW Conversation (17-Part Series)

This 17-part online series is a must for every home, school, police department, and faith-based organization in America that truly wants to understand the historical tension between police and communities of color. The NEW Conversation is the most relevant conversation in America with specific solutions to end police brutality.

"Dwayne Bryant has been a consistent and passionate voice of reason to students for over 23 years. Under my leadership as Chief Education Officer in Chicago Public Schools and now Superintendent of Matteson School District 162 and CEO of Southland College Prep, I am always looking for talented presenters to supplement our academic rigor with social emotional learning and life skills. Due to the Covid-19 Pandemic, we needed a highly engaging message of hope to permeate the homes of our families. Mr. Bryant was able to readjust with our district to create highly engaging content for our families to continue to focus on being successful individuals as well as productive citizens. I believe this content would positively impact families across the entire nation."
